PhD IN ECONOMIC AND MANAGEMENT
SCIENCES WITH BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

OVERVIEW

The PhD programme (PhD in Economic and Management Sciences with Business Administration) of the NWU Business School is a research-based doctoral degree offered at NQF Level 10. It is expected of prospective candidates to demonstrate experience, enthusiasm, research expertise, control of and focus on the topic and field of study during their doctoral study before they are selected for their doctoral studies. The NWU Business School's selection process is transparent and seeks exceptional research candidates who can contribute to the improvement of the Business School's research outputs that can make a theoretical and practical contribution in the field of business studies.

The PhD programme at the NWU Business School follows a four-phase approach: (a) a pre-doctoral workshop for conditional acceptance to the programme, (b) a full proposal colloquium for unconditional admission into the programme, (c) a methodology presentation colloquium, (d) results and findings colloquium, and (e) final thesis submission. We allocate the most relevant and highly experienced promoters and co-promoters to our admitted students, who are sourced from within the School and from relevant industries so that there is blending of theory and practice in the learning process.

APPROVAL OF THE STUDY PROGRAMME

Approval of the PhD study programme and the procedure that must be followed take place in terms of general academic rule A.5.3. The study programme must, to the satisfaction of the director of post-graduate studies/Business School scientific committees (General Management and People's Management Scientific Committees), contribute to the research programme(s) of the University as determined by the different research focus areas/units. All PhD students are required to submit at least one article in Department of Higher Education and Training (DHET)-accredited journals and provide proof with final submission for examination. In the case of an article format thesis, a minimum of three published OR publishable articles should be presented, of which at least one must have been submitted and accepted by an editor of an accredited DHET journal for graduation.

Specific admission requirements

- Students whose abilities in research methods are deemed not to be adequate by the school director/scientific committee members and research director will only be accepted into a PhD programme after successfully completing the Faculty's short course in research methodology.
- The PhD in Economic and Management Sciences with Business Administration is a part-time programme and students are registered on a part-time basis after they have successfully defended their full research proposal in a colloquium and accepted by the Business School/ Faculty.

- A student must have a SAQA approved master's/MBA degree, or the status of a relevant and applicable master's degree as approved by the Faculty's board and senate at NQF Level 9;
- The study field must be approved by the relevant school director and research unit director;
- A student must have passed the research component (Research module) with a minimum of 65% and the Mini Dissertation with a minimum of 65% of the above-mentioned master's degree.
- In case the candidate did a master's by dissertation only, the final mark of the overall degree average must be above 65%.
- The final number of conditional accepted applicants into our PhD programme for an academic year is influenced and guided by the number of PhD students who graduated in the previous year (e.g., if 10 graduated in 2020, then only 10 will be conditionally accepted for the 2021 academic year).
